Andrew Joseph maintains a busy practice across Immigration and Employment Law, regularly appearing in the First-tier and Upper Tribunal of the Immigration and Asylum Chamber. His work includes complex deportation appeals, EEA regulations, and cases involving the points-based system.

He is known for having a calm, clear, practical approach and for representing clients in cases where both legal detail and personal consequences carry significant weight.

In Employment Law, Andrew acts for claimants and has developed a growing reputation for handling sensitive and contentious issues. His work spans claims under the Equality Act 2010, whistleblowing, redundancy, and both constructive and unfair dismissal. He is instructed frequently in discrimination matters as well as delivering training and seminars on employment rights and workplace law.

Andrew's approachable manner, combined with his ability to distil complex issues into persuasive submissions, makes him a trusted choice for instructing solicitors and clients alike.
